19 This matter came before the Court for a hearing on November 29, 2012. The hearing was 20 continued on December 13, 2012, and then December 14, 2012. At issue is Plaintiff's Second 21 Motion for Sanctions Re Discovery (#71). The Court has considered the Motion, Defendant's 22 Opposition (#75), and the Plaintiff's Reply (#81). The Court has also considered the arguments 23 and representations presented at the hearing.

BACKGROUND

25 This case involves the purchase of an online trading network known as the Watch 26 Dealer's Network (WDN) by the Plaintiff from the Defendant, Soffer. WDN was intended to 27 operate in a manner similar to Amazon.com, with the distinction that it was for luxury watch 28 merchants. The Plaintiff Rapaport paid $500,000.00 for all the assets of WDN, and had control

1 of the business for approximately a year and a half. Both Rapaport and Soffer were members of 2 the board of WDN. Around a year and a half after Rapaport paid Soffer, Soffer asserts that he 3 took “emergency measures” as a board member of WDN in order to address what he believed 4 was Rapaport’s inability to run the company. In response, Rapaport filed suit against Soffer on 5 June 16, 2010. Complaint (#1).

6 Discovery in this case closed on August 31, 2012. Order Setting Discovery Deadline
7 (#65). However, a significant amount of the discovery has not been completed due to disputes
8 between the parties. Those disputes prompted a series of discovery motions. See Plaintiff's 9 Second Motion for Sanctions Re Discovery (#71); Plaintiff's Motion for Protective Order (#73)
10 and Sanctions (#74); Defendant's Request for Order to Compel (#78); and in the consolidated
11 case No. 2:12-cv-57-MMD-RJJ, Soffer's Motion to Deem Admissions (#30)

12 The present motion centers around the deposition of Defendant Avi Soffer. Plaintiffs' 13 Counsel, Mario Lovato, deposed Soffer on July 13, 2012. Deposition Transcript, attached as 14 Exhibit 1 at page 32, to Second Motion for Sanctions (#71). Soffer was represented by Adam 15 Wax and Efrem Rosenfeld of Rosenfeld, Bauma, & Forbes¹ at the deposition. Id. Wax was the 16 lead attorney. Id. Giving rise to this dispute, Lovato asserts that both Soffer and Wax prevented 17 the deposition from proceeding properly. Accordingly, he has requested an additional day to 18 depose Soffer. Lovato suggests that the deposition take place at the U.S. District Court for the 19 District of Nevada. Lovato, on behalf of the Plaintiff, has also requested that the Court sanction 20 both Soffer and his counsel by imposing all fees and costs associated with depositing Soffer and 21 the bringing of this motion.

22 The Court, in an attempt to collect some clarification on this and other discovery disputes, 23 held a hearing on November 29, 2012. The attorney present for Soffer was Guinness I.
24 Ohazuruike, Esq. from Rosenfeld, Bauma, & Forbes. At that hearing it became apparent that the 25 Ohazuruike was not responsible for and was not reasonably familiar with the present motion nor ¹At the time of the deposition the law firm was named Rosenfeld, Bauma, & Forbes. Efrem Rosenfeld represented to the Court at the hearing on December 27, 2012 that the firm has since changed to Rosenfeld & Bauma.

1 was we aware of what transpired at the deposition. Ohazuruike has been assigned to Soffer's 2 case very after the events leading to the present dispute had already occurred. Accordingly, the 3 Court continued the hearing to December 13, 2012, and ordered Efrem Rosenfeld, Esq., who was 4 present for the deposition, Ohazuruike, and Defendant Avi Soffer to all be present for the 5 continued hearing. Rosenfeld, Ohazuruike, and Soffer all attended the December 13, 2012, 6 hearing. Minutes of Proceeding (#85). The hearing did not conclude on December 13, 2012, and 7 was continued again to December 14, 2012. Id. Rosenfeld, Ohazuruike, and Soffer were all 8 present for the December 14, 2012, hearing as well. Minutes of Proceeding (#86). The Court 9 heard the parties representations and took the matter under submission.

DISCUSSION

11 Rapaport alleges that both Soffer and Wax's conduct at the deposition violated
 12 Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(d) and Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(a)(4). Specifically, Rapaport alleges: (1) Soffer
 13 engaged in non-responsive narratives to avoid answering questions; (2) Soffer sought to create a 14 false record by making "bizarre and impertinent statements"; (3) throughout the deposition, 15 Soffer refused to give any estimates so as to avoid giving meaningful testimony; (4) Soffer 16 repeatedly adopted the strategy of feigning lack of knowledge, providing "I don't know" 17 responses so as to avoid answering questions; and (5) Soffer's Counsel engaged in "bizarre, 18 harassing and improper conduct". Second Motion for Sanctions (#71). This conduct, Rapaport 19 asserts, violated Fed. R. Civ. P.. 30(d), which prohibits conduct which impedes, delays, and 20 frustrates a deposition, and Fed. R. Civ. P.. 37(a)(4), which prohibits evasive and incomplete 21 responses. Id.

22 In the Response, Defense counsel argues that the Plaintiff's concerns are "trivialities that 23 should be ignored with good humor." Response to Second Motion for Sanctions (#75) at 2, lines 24 18-19. Notably, Defense Counsel fails to cite a single authority in the entire Response.
 25 Response to Second Motion for Sanctions (#75). Rather, at only two points in the entire filing 26 does Defense Counsel acknowledge that there is applicable law.² Response to Second Motion for

28 ²First, the Response at page 3 mentions the Federal Rules, but fails to state which Rule or Rules it is referencing nor does it give any citation. Response to Second Motion for Sanctions (#75).

1 Sanctions (#75) at 3, lines 6-7, and at 6, lines 25-28. Finally, at the hearing, Rosenfeld affirmed 2 that he believed Soffer or Wax's conduct was acceptable at the deposition. He asserted that the 3 transcript was not a full representation of the deposition because it could not convey attitudes and 4 tone.

5 The applicable law for this dispute is the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure 30 and 37. See 6 Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(d) and Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(a)(4). The court may impose an appropriate 7 sanction—including the reasonable expenses and attorneys' fees incurred by any party—on a 8 person who impedes, delays, or frustrates the fair examination of the deponent. Fed. R. Civ. P.
 9 30(d). Additionally, Rule 37(a)(4) prohibits evasive or incomplete answers or responses.

10 I. Deposition Conduct

11 A. Non-Responsive Narrative

12 Rapaport alleges that Soffer engaged in non-responsive narrative to avoid answering 13 questions. He points to five lengthy exchanges during the deposition as examples of this 14 behavior. Second Motion for Sanctions (#71) at pages 3-6. In each of the given examples, 15 Rapaport's counsel asks Soffer a pointed question, Soffer embarks on a narrative that has little to 16 do with the question asked, and refuses to give yes or no answers once requested to do so by 17 Rapaport's counsel. Id. For example, one question asked of Soffer was whether he instructed Joe 18 Nelson to stop payments to the Rapport Office. Second Motion for Sanctions (#71) at 4-5; 19 Deposition Transcript at 170-172, attached as Exhibit 1 at page 32, to Second Motion for 20 Sanctions (#71). Soffer answered with a narrative about how he had conversations with Joe 21 Nelson about how Rapaport showed "illogical, irrational, and very questionable behavior," was 22 "insane", and was "hijacking" the company. Id. He went on to conclude that "If [Nelson] wasn't 23 going to send [payments] to Rapaport because he thinks Rapaport's insane, then maybe he was 24 advised to send them where he felt more comfortable." Id. At the hearing, when questioned about 25 this specific response, Rosenfeld stated that he believed Soffer, by saying "maybe [Nelson] was 26

27 Second, the Response at page 6 states "Decided cases suggest that courts and litigants should 28 consider these factors in evaluating whether the imposition of sanctions for Rule 30(d), (37), violations is warranted . . ." However, no cases are actually cited. Id.

1 advised to send them where he felt more comfortable”, was answering “yes” to the question.
2 Similarly, Soffer’s counsel at the deposition, in response to these sorts of answers by Soffer, 3 stated that Soffer was answering questions “just fine,” declined to take a break to talk to his 4 client, and interrupted only when he noticed Rapaport’s Counsel was whispering to Rapaport
5 during one of Soffer’s answers. Id. However, a simple reading of Soffer’s response to the above
6 question indicates that there was no actual answer, just a non-responsive narrative. Rosenfeld’s 7 contention that Soffer was indicating “yes” with his answer, is not convincing.

8 At other points in the deposition, such as the five examples given by Rapaport, Soffer 9 gave similarly non-responsive narratives. Soffer’s counsel defends this behavior by arguing “[i]n 10 some instances, the questions were fully answered except that the answers were not what the 11 deposing attorney had hoped to hear or needed to prevail in his claims.” Response to Second 12 Motion for Sanctions (#75) at 3-4, lines 27-1 (emphasis added). Thus, Soffer’s counsel 13 concedes that at least some questions were not fully answered. Furthermore, a thorough look at 14 all the examples provided indicates that Soffer was engaging in narratives which were evasive at 15 best, but primarily non-responsive.

16 B. Impertinent Statements

17 Rapaport alleges that Soffer made “bizarre and impertinent statements” thus impeding the 18 deposition. He argues that first, Soffer stopped answering a question to point out “for the record” 19 that Rapaport was sleeping. Second Motion for Sanctions (#71) at 6-7; Deposition Transcript at 20 141-142, attached as Exhibit 1 at page 32, to Second Motion for Sanctions (#71). Second, Soffer 21 called Rapaport’s counsel a bully, told him to speak more clearly and accused him of making 22 faces. Second Motion for Sanctions (#71) at 7; Deposition Transcript at 143, attached as Exhibit 23 1 at page 32, to Second Motion for Sanctions (#71). Third, Soffer continuously interrupted and 24 was instructed twice by the Court Reporter to stop interrupting. Second Motion for Sanctions 25 (#71) at 7-9; Deposition Transcript at 140-141, 144, attached as Exhibit 1 at page 32, to Second 26 Motion for Sanctions (#71). Fourth, he laughed when his counsel was objecting to whether he 27 had to answer whether there were three board members. Second Motion for Sanctions (#71) at 9; 28 Deposition Transcript at 195-196, attached as Exhibit 1 at page 32, to Second Motion for

1 Sanctions (#71).

2 In the Response, Soffer's counsel defends this behavior and asserts that it "could be 3 ignored or take[n] with [a] good sense of humor." Response to Second Motion for Sanctions 4 (#75) at 4, lines 6-8. He argues that Rapaport's attorney "has a higher than normal sensitivity to 5 human conduct or the long lingering bitterness generated by this case has indeed permeated 6 beyond the litigants . . ." Id., lines 18-21. At the hearing, Rosenfeld claimed that there was a lot 7 of tension in the room and the transcript fails to reflect that tension. Thus, Soffer's counsel is 8 arguing that Soffer's conduct was appropriate because this case has "long lingering bitterness." 9 Id. Soffer's counsel is incorrect. In cases with long lingering bitterness, the attorneys should 10 strive to cooperate with one another, operate with an even higher level of professionalism, and 11 instruct their clients to do the same. Soffer's counsel completely failed in this regard.

12 While alone any of the above behaviors would not indicate a violation of Rule 30(d), they 13 do point to the overall antagonistic and impeding nature of the deposition.

14 C. Refusal to Give Estimates

15 Rapaport argues that Soffer refused to give any estimates so as to avoid giving 16 meaningful testimony. Second Motion for Sanctions (#71) at 9. Soffer continuously stated that 17 he would not provide estimates because he only wanted to give "facts." Second Motion for 18 Sanctions (#71) at 9-16. He refused to estimate WDN's net profits, number of paying members,³ 19 amount of money being earned at the time of sale, and amount of money deposited to a 20 safekeeping account, among other things. Second Motion for Sanctions (#71) at 13-16. Soffer 21 asserts that his answers were appropriate and that he did not have to give any estimates because 22 they call for speculation. Response to Second Motion for Sanctions (#75) at 3, lines 6-7. This 23 "blanket refusal," Rapaport argues, is improper because many of the estimates were clearly 24 within Soffer's knowledge. Reply to Second Motion for Sanctions (#81) at 2, lines 9-11.

25 Based on the transcript of the deposition, it appears that Soffer was indeed just trying to

26
 27 ³ Soffer went so far as to say he did not know whether WDN had one paying member.
 28 Second Motion for Sanctions (#71) at 13-14; Deposition Transcript at 75, attached as Exhibit 1 at page 32, to Second Motion for Sanctions (#71).

1 be difficult and impede the deposition. This conclusion can be reached because it turns out that 2 Soffer was actually willing to give estimates when those estimates were part of his long evasive 3 narratives. He only refused to give estimates when directly asked to do so. For example, when 4 asked if he withdrew any money from a WDN credit card as cash, after a long narrative filled 5 with accusations about Rapaport that had nothing to do with the question, he states that he 6 “withdrew approximately $8,000 in a cash advance from that account and deposited it into a 7 safekeeping account . . .” Deposition Transcript at 161-162, attached as Exhibit 1 at page 32, to 8 Second Motion for Sanctions (#71). Thus, he was not truly opposed to giving estimate, he was 9 just opposed to answering questions. Further, Soffer specifically stated he would not give 10 estimates because he prefers facts, thus admitting that he just did not want to answer the 11 question. Deposition Transcript at 181, attached as Exhibit 1 at page 32, to Second Motion for 12 Sanctions (#71).

13 His refusal to give estimates is yet another example of how Soffer intentionally impeded 14 the deposition.

15 D. “I don’t know” Responses

16 Rapaport argues that Soffer repeatedly adopted the strategy of feigning lack of 17 knowledge, providing “I don’t know” responses so as to avoid answering questions. Soffer on the 18 other hand asserts that it is not improper to say “I don’t know or I have forgotten, even if the 19 information sought is simple and within the expected knowledge of the deponent.” Response to 20 Second Motion for Sanctions (#75) at 5, lines 1-3. He goes on to explain that when a witness 21 does not know what he ought to know, that will make an impression on the judge and jury, but it 22 is allowable. Id., lines 6-9.

23 Here, Soffer is correct. Soffer’s testimony has made an impression on the Court. He 24 went so far as to say he did not know: (1) what assets were transferred in the WDN sale, (2)
25 whether he had control of the WDN website, (3) whether he took control of credit card payments 26 (4) what he meant by “emergency measures” in his own cross claim (5) whether he had control of 27 the WDN telephone number (6) whether a person he personally paid to maintain the WDN 28 website was acting under his control, (7) whether he changed the WDN website passwords, and

1 (8) to which Rapaport Las Vegas Office deposing counsel was referring in one question.⁴ Second 2 Motion for Sanctions (#71) at 16-27.

3 In most of these instances, the Court cannot know for certain whether Soffer did or did 4 not know these basic facts about WDN. It is possible he completely forgot this basic information 5 and only retained the things he rambled on about in his non-responsive answers. However, when 6 Soffer asked which Las Vegas Office deposing counsel was referring to and then later admitted 7 he knew there was only one, it is clear he was merely attempting to delay the deposition. Second 8 Motion for Sanctions (#71) at 26; Deposition Transcript at 153, attached as Exhibit 1 at page 32, 9 to Second Motion for Sanctions (#71). Thus, in at least that instance, Soffer was yet again 10 delaying and impeding his deposition.

11 E. Defense Counsel's Improper Conduct

12 In addition to facilitating, refusing to correct, and encouraging the above behavior, 13 Rapaport argues that Soffer's counsel engaged in improper conduct at two other portions of the 14 deposition. First, at one point in the deposition, Wax improperly refused to let Soffer answer a 15 question on the basis of attorney-client privilege. However, Soffer's other attorney, Rosenfeld, 16 acknowledged that there was no privilege. Second Motion for Sanctions (#71) at 27. In defense 17 of this conduct, Soffer's counsel asserts this was appropriate because, regardless of whether it 18 was a proper objection, it was a "good faith objection" and Rapaport's counsel is "too sensitive."
 19 Response to Second Motion for Sanctions (#75) at 6, lines 11-15. This is an erroneous assertion.
 20 The objection could not have been in good faith if, even though Rosenfeld informed Wax that the 21 objection was not proper, Wax continued to object. Additionally, arguing that opposing counsel 22 is "too sensitive" for wanting an answer to a question is not a legal argument.

23 The second moment of alleged improper conduct occurred when Soffer's counsel refused 24 to allow Rapaport's counsel to take a break. Second Motion for Sanctions (#71) at 27-29.
 25 Rapaport's counsel stated "Let's take a quick break." Deposition Transcript at 206-208, attached 26

27 ⁴He later admitted that he knew there was only one Las Vegas Office. Second Motion for 28 Sanctions (#71) at 26; Deposition Transcript at 153, attached as Exhibit 1 at page 32, to Second Motion for Sanctions (#71).

1 as Exhibit 1 at page 32, to Second Motion for Sanctions (#71). Soffer's counsel responded "I 2 don't agree to taking a break." Id. Rapaport's counsel then left anyway, apparently to use the 3 restroom. Id. Soffer's counsel insisted the court reporter continue transcribing the deposition, put 4 on the record that he did not agree to the break, and marked the minutes that Rapaport's counsel 5 was out of the room. Id. During that time, Soffer, apparently attempted to make some legal 6 analysis, stated "Could this be a purposeful attempt at, a chilling attempt by an inappropriate or 7 perhaps sanctionable chilling effect by opposing counsel?" Id. After Rapaport's Counsel was 8 gone for five minutes, Soffer's counsel threatened to end the deposition, and Rapaport's counsel
 9 returned to the room. Id. Soffer's counsel indicated that he did not believe that Rapaport's 10 counsel had used the restroom. Id.

11 In the Response, Soffer's counsel defends this behavior stating that "[t]he issue of a break 12 was not properly handled by the deposing attorney and the reaction of the other couldn't have 13 been better." Response to Second Motion for Sanctions (#75) at 6, lines 22-24. However, at the 14 hearing, Rosenfeld acknowledged that the mood in the room was very tense and it was a good 15 time to take a break. Rosenfeld also represented to the Court that he talked to his co-counsel 16 during the break and instructed him on proper deposition conduct. Based on the deposition 17 transcript, that representation is false or the instruction failed. Deposition Transcript at 206-208, 18 attached as Exhibit 1 at page 32, to Second Motion for Sanctions (#71). Rosenfeld did not speak 19 during the break. Id. Based on this behavior, as well as the behavior throughout the deposition, it 20 appears that both Soffer and his counsel have impeded, delayed, and frustrated the fair 21 examination of Soffer.

22 II. Sanctions

23 Fed. R. Civ .P. 30(d)(2) states that the "court may impose an appropriate sanction - 24 including the reasonable expenses and attorney's fees incurred by any party - on a person who 25 impedes, delays, or frustrates the fair examination of the deponent." Here, therefore, because 26 Soffer and his counsel impeded, delayed, and frustrated the fair examination of Soffer, sanctions 27 under Rule 30 are appropriate.

28 Additionally, under Fed. R. Civ. P.. 37(a)(5)(A), once the Court grants a motion for

1 failure to cooperate in discovery, the Court must, “after giving an opportunity to be heard, require 2 . . . the party or the attorney advising the conduct, or both to pay the movant’s reasonable 3 expenses incurred in making the motion, including attorney’s fees.” However, such an award is 4 not appropriate if: “(I) the movant filed the motion before attempting in good faith to obtain the 5 disclosure or discovery without court action; (ii) the opposing party’s non-disclosure, response, or 6 objection was substantially justified; or (iii) other circumstances make an award of expenses 7 unjust.” Id.

8 Here, the Court held a hearing on December 27, 2012, in order to give the Defendant an 9 opportunity to be heard. At that hearing, the Defendant failed to explain why a sanction would 10 not be appropriate. First, the Plaintiffs made a good faith attempt to encourage Soffer and his 11 counsel to cooperate in Soffer’s deposition. Lovato asked Soffer to clarify and answer correctly 12 throughout the deposition, and also gave Wax numerous opportunities to counsel Soffer in 13 proper deposition conduct. Second, there was no justification for Soffer and his counsel’s lack of 14 cooperation. Soffer’s counsel’s suggestion that the disputed behaviors were “trivialities that 15 should be ignored with good humor,” is an attempt to obscure the outrageous behavior described 16 above. See Response to Second Motion for Sanctions (#75) at 2, lines 18-19. Finally, the Court 17 specifically asked Soffer’s counsel, Rosenfeld, whether there was any reason an award would be 18 unjust. Rosenfeld’s only response was that the amount of costs and fees Lovato provided was 19 “shocking” and he had never seen such a high amount. The mere fact that the amount requested 20 is large, is not an explanation for why an award would be unjust. Accordingly, sanctions under 21 Rule 37 are appropriate.

22 Rapaport has requested cost and fees associated with deposing Soffer and bringing this 23 motion, as well as a second day to depose Soffer, preferably in the U.S. courthouse. Costs and 24 fees as explained above, are appropriate. The amount of such fees will be addressed in a separate 25 order. However, in light of the many discovery impediments in this case, other motions presently 26 before the Court, and the long past August 31, 2012, discovery deadline, the Court finds that an 27 additional day of deposition would be superfluous. Thus, sanctions will be limited to costs and 28 fees.

4 CONCLUSION

5 Based on the foregoing, and good cause appearing therefore,
6 IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that the Plaintiff's Second Motion for Sanctions Re
